

A FORTUNE JUST WHEN HE NEEDED IT.

Dr. Duesberg and His Bride Were Stranded in Vineland When Good News Came.

The Young Man Inherits His Father's Estate in Germany, Amounting to Over 600,000 Marks.

FARMER HERMAN'S BOARD BILL.

It Is Settled Now, Although a Jury of Colored Men, Who Heard the Suit, Found No Cause for Action.

Vineland, N. J., March 13.—Dr. Herman Duesberg and his beautiful bride went back to Germany with a lasting impression of his honeymoon in America. Arriving in Vineland in a stranded condition, he has received word of the death of his father in Munich, Germany, leaving him an estate worth 600,000 marks. Duesberg and his wife are now being cared for by newly made friends until funds arrive from Germany.

Duesberg is a native of Munich, and was graduated a chemist in schools at Munich and Paris. While at Munich he fell in love with a Miss Stenberg. His folks objected to the match, and with only a few hundred dollars in his pocket, Duesberg eloped with his sweetheart, got married in London and came to this country. After seeing the sights in New York, Mrs. Duesberg thought of an aunt by the name of Mrs. Emil Herman, living near Vineland, and the couple visited her.

When they arrived, Farmer Herman, seeing the bride's elaborate trousseau and hearing her tales of Duesberg's wealth across the sea, made up his mind that he would get as much of it as possible while the couple remained. In twelve hours he had induced Duesberg to buy a cow and chickens and commenced to importune him to lift a mortgage of $450 from the farm. Finally the farmer made the honeymoon of Duesberg so unpleasant that the couple left.

Herman, becoming enraged at this, made out a bill of $24.50 for eight days' board and sued Duesberg. The case came up before Justice Miller to-day, and he, thinking the case of little importance, summoned a colored constable, who collected a jury of negroes. This was the first time a negro jury ever served in Vineland, and a humorous crowd gathered in the courtroom.

Great was the sensation created when the defendant and his newly checked bride entered, decked in finery seldom witnessed in this place. Those at the hearing say that the bride was the most beautiful woman that ever came to Vineland. On her fingers were gems said to be worth $1,200 each.

Herman's bill was very unique. He charged for eggs at eighteen cents per dozen, $1.50 for hauling trunks, and various other items, which the Justice laughingly remarked included everything except breathing.

The jury quickly brought in a verdict of no cause for action, and the plaintiff was charged with costs. After the hearing, Justice Miller apologized to Duesberg for his jury, saying that in this country a black man was as good as a white one.

Duesberg asked his counsel, Wheaton Bennett, for a copy of the summons, saying he wished to keep it as a souvenir of his wedding trip in America.

SLEIGH UPSET IN THE SNOW.

Eight Women and Twelve Men Have an Unpleasant Experience.

Bloomfield, N. J., March 13.—A sleighing party from Paterson came to grief on the Bay avenue hill in this place last night, by the upsetting of the sleigh, which was being driven by James McLaughlin. He drove too close to a deep gutter, resulting in one of the runners sliding off the road.

There was a wild scramble among the twenty odd passengers, eight of whom were women. Two of the latter were cut about the head, while four of the men were badly bruised. The sleighing party procured another vehicle from a farmer and returned home.

OLDEST HOUSE IN WESTWOOD.

It Was Built in 1854, and Is Now Being Torn Down.

Westwood, N. J., March 13.—Carpenters to-day began removing from its foundation an old two-story frame building at the corner of Westwood and Railroad avenues. This was the first house erected in Westwood, fifty-four years ago. It was built by James Bogart, brother of Jacob, who was the village schoolmaster. The old building was sold at public auction last Saturday to Aaron Tuers for $35. He will erect a fine brick structure in its place. A number of the residents had the old building photographed before the work of tearing it down commenced.

RICHTER GETS SIX MONTHS.

A Camden Lawyer Sent to Prison for Embezzlement.

Camden, N. J., March 13.—Augustus Richter, a member of the Camden Bar, was to-day sentenced to six months' imprisonment for embezzlement by Judge Vroom in the Camden Criminal Court.

Several months ago Lawyer Richter was indicted for embezzling money belonging to a client. He pleaded guilty, and sentence was suspended with the understanding that Richter would abandon practice as an attorney, and proceedings would be instituted before the Supreme Court for his disbarment. He continued to practice and the charge was pressed against him.

STABBED A FELLOW-BOARDER.

Nicholson Entered Smith's Room While the Latter Was Asleep.

George Nicholson, of No. 190 Bay street, Jersey City, entered the room of Edward Smith, a fellow-boarder, at 7:30 a. m. yesterday, while the latter was asleep, and stabbed him in the left side with a small penknife. The wound was not a dangerous one.

Smith was taken to St. Francis Hospital. Nicholson was not arrested, as Smith declined to make a complaint. It was said by the police that he was drunk.

PRODIGAL SON RETURNS.

Robert Porter, of Elizabeth, Walked All the Way Home from Pennsylvania.

Elizabeth, N. J., March 13.—A week ago last Tuesday the parents of Robert Porter, seventeen years old, were greatly worried because he did not return home that night. He had called to see his married sister in another part of the city, and had left her home early in the evening, and that was the last seen of him.

Robert's father, John P. Porter, who lives at No. 829 Livingston street, visited all the surrounding cities making inquiries, and the police were notified, but no trace of the boy could be found. He was a good, obedient, industrious boy, and his mother had been nearly crazed by his absence, fearing that he met with foul play. He had about $10 with him at the time he left.

This morning Robert walked into the house, with clothes the worse for exposure and bearing a generally dilapidated appearance. He had gone away to seek his fortune in the West, after the manner of dime novel heroes, but the weather grew so cold and he got so homesick when he had penetrated as far as the mountains of Pennsylvania that he decided to return to his loving mother and comfortable home.

He returned on foot. He says there are $2,041.21 ties on the tracks between here and Pennsylvania, for he counted them.

ARE TO TRAIN SERVANTS.

The Women of Orange Establish a School and Will Try to Settle the Vexed Question.

Orange, N. J., March 13.—A meeting of the directors of the Domestic Training Association, which is a branch of the Orange Women's Improvement Society, was held this afternoon, at No. 452 Main street. At this meeting all the final arrangements for the opening of the training school were made.

The house at No. 432 Main street has been engaged, and all the plans for adapting it to the purpose have been carefully considered and carried out. Everything is in readiness for the beginning of this work that has for so long a time been uppermost in the minds of the philanthropic women of Orange. The scheme is an old one, and sprang from the need of well trained servants that was experienced by the residents.

The method to be followed is novel, and is such that women may secure competent servants and maids and cooks satisfactory places.

The enterprise was begun at the instigation of Mrs. S. H. Gallison, the president of the Women's Improvement Society, and her suggestion met with so much active cooperation that definite plans were at once undertaken. The scope of the work is such that when a girl enters this modern, up-to-date school she will at once start on a course of instruction that will fit her for service in any family.

The heads are to be taught to move in harmony with the hands, and everything of a domestic nature to be included in a well planned course. The course will be a small one, and will be given in the evening. When a girl enters the school she will at once be put in a neat working dress, will be taught to wash and iron, and will be given the art of waiting on the door and table, of cleaning, of setting the table, of making and caring for the table linen, to cook plain things as well as fancy dishes, and, in fact, will receive instruction in everything that pertains to household service. For this only a nominal sum will be charged.

Mrs. Sarah L. Craig, an Ohio woman, has been elected to be the instructor. Miss Craig is a graduate of the Boston Cooking School, and has had a wide experience in such work in Boston, Buffalo, Cincinnati and other places. She will have full charge.

One novelty that will be inaugurated is that novices, footmen and men servants in general will also have the benefit of training. An intelligence office will also be a feature.

Among those interested are Mrs. Theodore Seward, Mrs. William Riker, Jr., and Mrs. Anna Sutherland, secretary of the Press Association.

THE CRANES FORCED OUT.

Changes in Management of Hoboken District Telegraph.

President B. N. Crane and his son, Manager C. A. Crane, of the American District Telegraph Company of Hoboken, have been deposed from their positions. This action was taken at a special meeting of the directors, held Thursday night.

The concern has been in business sixteen years, and always did well. Up to two years ago its affairs were managed by A. K. Banta, now chief electrician of the Hudson Electric Company. C. A. Crane succeeded him. He was to pay $50 a month rental to the company and keep a certain percentage of the proceeds. It is charged that he failed to fulfil his obligations, and so the directors decided to remove him, and to recover $350 has been instituted against him.

These new officers have been elected: Bernard Boyer, president; Gustave Hanft, secretary; and Francis Boyer, treasurer; F. M. McDonough, secretary.

TO CATCH TAX DODGERS.

Owners of Stock Must Make Payment to the Municipality in Which the Bank Is Located.

Queen's Bill Passed by the New Jersey House After Prolonged Discussion of the Subject.

MEANS A GREAT DEAL TO TRENTON.

The Enforcement of the Law Will Increase the Tax Values of That City at Least a Million Dollars.

Trenton, N. J., March 13.—Two hundred millions of dollars escape taxation in this State, on which account a bill was passed this morning in the House providing that hereafter all taxes on national and State bank stocks shall be paid by the banks to the municipalities in which such banks are located, and the amounts deducted from the dividends of the stockholders.

Mr. Queen, who introduced the bill, stated that he had ascertained from the State Board of Taxation that at least 50 per cent of the bank stock in New Jersey escaped taxation, although there is a law in existence requiring the taxing of the stock in the locality where the stockholder resides.

Macpherson, of Trenton, showed that the passage of this law would enrich that city's treasury by adding $1,000,000 to its tax rates. His colleagues, Thors, described how these tax dodgers operated, maintaining a legal residence in some township where taxes were placed at a low figure, but actually residing in the city where the bank whose stock they owned was located.

In this manner they found it very easy to evade a higher and a fair tax rate. An instance of this was given in the case of a prominent man who lived in a Trenton hotel for three hundred days in the year, while the remaining sixty-five days were spent in Monmouth County, where his taxes were assessed. A somewhat similar case of tax dodging is quite familiar to New Yorkers, it requiring no stretch of the imagination to recall an instance of a most noted millionaire, who has impoverished the treasury of that city to the extent of thousands of dollars, by technically claiming residence in New Jersey.

Messrs. Walling, Reed and Harrison opposed the passage of the bill, the chief burden of their argument being that it would prove detrimental to the tax rates in towns or cities where no banks are located, but where holders of bank stock resided. In addition to this the first named gentleman contended that it contained an invasion on the honesty of such holders of stock as did not make a proper return of their holdings.

The basis of calculation which Mr. Queen used in arriving at the enormous percentage of loss to the State is as follows: When assessed on the basis of the New Jersey capital stock, surplus and undivided profits as the basis for estimating the value of the stock, the aggregate of the capital stock in bank, surplus and undivided profits is $14,658,350, of the State banks, $1,634,361. The surplus of the former is $7,748,185, of the latter $2,000,000. The aggregate of $25,016,475, undivided profits not being taken into consideration.

The bill was passed by a vote of 34 to 20.

HE GAVE HIMSELF UP.

Bettscheck, Accused of Stealing Belle Smith's Diamonds, Surrendered to the Police.

Newark, N. J., March 13.—For many years a woman who was fat but not fair, a woman who was fat but not fair, ran a saloon on Mulberry, near Mechanic street. She was then known as Harry Sander, and was a great favorite of the police. She was a great favorite of the police. She was a great favorite of the police.

Shortly afterward Belle sold out, and her resort, which for years had been a rendezvous for city and county officials and politicians of both parties, became a thing of the past. Sander later went to Texas, where he now is, and Belle disappeared for a time.

Last October she returned to this city and met a former bartender of her place. Together they went to the saloon of Charles Sander, the ex-light champion, on Market street, where they had some drinks. Here they met a man named Gustave Bettscheck, of Belleville.

Bettscheck disappeared with over a thousand dollars' worth of jewelry belonging to the woman, and it is alleged, about $900 in cash.

The robbery was not reported to the police for several days, although they learned of it in an indirect way. The woman knew the man, but she did not know where to find him, so she went before the Grand Jury and had him indicted.

That was the last heard of him until a short time ago when Belle and a female companion were arrested for disorderly conduct and were fined $25 each. Belle gave Detective Wriggins some of her diamonds to guarantee the fine.

It was then that Detective Wriggins first learned of the former loss, and at once an investigation which resulted in his locating and recovering most of the jewelry. He also succeeded in locating Bettscheck in Little Washington street, near the Belleville, but was unable to apprehend him.

Last night, when all hope of apprehending the man had been abandoned, he walked into the police station and surrendered. He admitted taking the jewelry, but said he only took it for safe keeping, and being unable to find the woman afterward sold the jewelry piece by piece. It consisted of diamond rings, bracelets, necklaces, earrings and a gold watch. He was committed for trial.

It was learned that after Belle left the city she went to New Hartford, Conn., where her husband was living and kept a grocery store. His name is said to be Clark, and her last name is said to be Jennie Clark, not Belle Sander. She is at present at Waverly, with her husband.

HEIRS OF AN OLD ESTATE.

The Claim of Henry Klopp's Descendants Will Affect Title to Staten Island Lands.

Villages of Port Richmond and Graniteville Now Stand on the Old Farm.

LEGAL ACTION TO BE COMMENCED.

The Original Owner of These Broad Acres Was a Hessian Soldier Who Deserted to Marry an American Girl.

Port Richmond, N. J., March 13.—The heirs of Henry Klopp, who died at Northfield, Staten Island, in 1790, will shortly commence an action to recover certain lands left by him and which they believe are now illegally in the possession of others.

Klopp was a Hessian soldier hired by the British to fight against the patriot army during the War of the Revolution. While quartered in New York he met a pretty New York girl of Dutch ancestry and fell in love with her. She agreed to marry him if he would remain in this country, but declined to follow him across the ocean. He offered to go home and come back, but the girl said he must remain where his company were ordered, or the marriage would not take place.

Klopp, like the majority of the Hessians, had very little sympathy with the cause for which he was fighting and promised her to desert. A few hours before the Hessians were to sail the soldier confided to several of his companions the fact that he was in love and must desert to marry the object of his choice.

When the company of which Klopp was a member answered roll call for the last time before going aboard ship, Klopp was absent. Search was made for him with no success. While the officers chatted and drank a farewell glass of wine on the dock before going aboard ship, Klopp was hid in the big pouches that did duty as a table.

When the ship was out of sight he came from his hiding place and a few days later was married to the girl for whose sake he had braved death as a deserter.

Klopp, after his marriage, moved to Staten Island and purchased a tract of land. Portions of this farm are now part of Northfield and Port Richmond and all of the village of Graniteville. Klopp died in 1790, leaving a will made but a few days before his death. To his wife, in lieu of a dowry, he gave 5000—a large amount at the beginning of the present century. The estate was to be divided among seven children—John, William, Peter, Jacob, Henry, Charlotte and Barbara.

Shortly after Klopp's death his widow married one of the executors of the will, Peter Ammerman. The children grew up and, with the exception of Barbara, there is no record that any of them ever received a share of the property.

The heirs in 1860 made an effort to secure the title to the farm, but were defeated. Several of them went to the front in defense of the flag their ancestor had been imported to fight.

Lately the heirs have gotten together, and Lawyer Wilson Mendel, of No. 206 Broadway, New York, who is one of the heirs, has been quietly collecting the material for bringing suit for possession of the property.

The Klopp children, as they grew up, changed their name to Clapp, and the heirs of the old Hessian soldier now number over a dozen. The farm has been divided into town lots and a great portion of it is supposed to be in the interior of the island, still in farm lands.

The plot of the farm is known to the old settlers as the old Klopp estate. The action of the heirs, when brought, will affect the validity of many titles on ground on the island. The old farm is now roughly estimated to be worth about $1,000,000.

GUNPOWDER IN HIS PIPE BOWL.

An Explosion Which Made Slocum Believe That His Time Had Come.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 13.—Albert Slocum, night manager at Gordon's livery stables, was fired last night and laid down on a bale of hay to smoke his pipe, the bowl of which is fitted to a two-foot red stem. Slocum was just dropping into a doze when a waggish horse dealer stole up and dropped a pinch of gunpowder into the burning tobacco.

There was an explosion. The air was filled with flying sparks, tobacco and the fragments of the pipe bowl. Slocum thought that his time had come. He ran out of the stable to the engine house across the street, and cried to the firemen: "Get out gear engine, quick. The whole stable is on fire."

The firemen rushed out, but saw no evidence of fire. The victim of the gunpowder plot did not regain his composure the rest of the night. He mourns for his pipe.

PROF. RANCE'S SUDDEN MOVE.

Notified the School Janitor and Then Left Orange.

Orange, N. J., March 13.—The association in charge of the German-American school hall in Park street is said to be in financial straits. The school has been established for thirty-five years, and is patronized by many German families who send their children there to learn the English language. The upper floor of the building is rented for entertainments and balls.

During the past year the attendance at the school has fallen off, and there has been no demand for the school hall. A call has been sent out to all the German families in the vicinity, asking them to attend a meeting to be held at the school on March 22, when an effort will be made to raise funds to tide over its financial difficulties.

Principal John Range, for fifteen years connected with the school, left Orange on Saturday night. He notified the janitor of the school that he had resigned, and would not be back.

Newark, N. J., March 13.—The members of the Frelinghuysen Lancers have decided by a unanimous vote to exclude the Spanish flag from the decorations which are to be made at the auditorium on the occasion of the Lancers' annual reception.

It has always been the custom of the company to have the ball room decorated with flags of all nations, but this time the Spanish colors will be omitted. The propriety of doing this was suggested at a recent meeting and the suggestion was moved and carried almost unanimously.

CHING, A MERRY MINSTREL.

For a Week the Chinese Tramp Was a Great Attraction to New Brunswick People.

Tramps Took Him in Hand and Now He Is a Fully Initiated Member of the Fraternity.

HIS MONEY PAID FOR THEIR MEAL.

Played and Sang About the Streets, but Was Treated So Roughly That He Feared to Remain Longer.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 13.—The biggest curiosity this town has seen in a long while is Ching Lee, a merry Chinese minstrel, who arrived about a week ago, and has been making money ever since by playing a curious instrument, which he called a "sam-sam."

Ching Lee was a prime favorite with the tramp fraternity, and put up at the tramps' lodging house on Nelson street for the first few days. He was such a curiosity that he compelled attention from the regular lights of the road, but while he was so sociable enough when they were dividing the spoils of their visits to the town kitchens, he maintained the reputation of his race in not giving anything away himself.

The inmates at the tramps' lodging house decided last night to initiate the "pig-tail hobo," as they called Ching. That meant that since he had shown all the true instincts and habits of a tramp, he was to be put through the rites of the tramp fraternity. The tramps knew that they would have to steal a march on Ching to carry out the initiation, which was to consist of a series of rapid evolutions about the main sleeping room of the lodging house, with Ching as a sort of football.

First of all he was stripped as soon as he went to sleep, all his possessions taken to buy liquor; then he was banged against the wall on all four sides of the room, made to stand on his head in the middle of the floor until every tramp had walked about his body three times, and then he was placed on a table and told to dance until the dawn arrived. There were a few minor tricks which the hoboes refused to divulge.

Ching Lee took the tasks which the hoboes piled upon him with a certain stolid good nature, but was pretty well exhausted. He was finally told to get back into his clothes, and to watch the feast from a corner of the room. They piled chairs against him with the threat that if he moved he would be made to dance on the table again. Ching raised a great cry when he missed his money bag. He was disposed to fight, but the odds were against him.

The tramps had molested him to the amount of some five dollars. He was told to leave town. Ching had a fair meal of sardines, crackers, cheese and beer. Poor Ching was the butt of their jokes, as the banquets disposed of the food. Having made merry until three o'clock this morning, the tramps tumbled into their beds, leaving two of their number to watch Ching Lee until daylight.

Ching was a disconsolate Chinaman this morning when he went to the Burnet street saloon-keeper, who had befriended him during his visit, and told him his tale of woe. Ching said that he was going to leave town.

Ching Lee had recovered his spirits later, and began to play on his "sam-sam," an instrument that looked like a huge gourd with strings stretched across its surface. It was odd music, and its harmonies did not appeal to the ear. What attracted the crowd which gathered about the curious sight of a Chinese minstrel, for after Ching had finished a number he sang in a shrill monotone.

The response when he passed his broad-brimmed, black felt hat was quite generous. Ching had been making collections about the city for a week, and it is estimated that he has made $4 a day since he struck town.

Ching's experiences were too much for him. He was still suffering in mind and body from the tortures of the night, and, fearing that they might be repeated if he stayed, he decided to leave town about noon. The last seen of Ching he was tramping over the turnpike toward Franklin Park.

SENT HOME FOR A BATH.

Passaic Parents Angry at the Way Their Children Were Treated at School.

Passaic, N. J., March 13.—The Board of Education recently passed a rule ordering that the heads of all scholars should be examined.

School No. 2 and two primary departments in the poorer districts of Dunellen were subjected to the examination to-day. It resulted in about one hundred pupils in No. 2 and one entire primary department from Dunellen being sent home. This was before noon.
